The Foreign Market Steady and Not Materially Affected by the News.

WALL STREET, MONDAY, Sept. 22, 1873. }
The undertone of Wall street to-day has been emphatic in its indications. Excitement is apparently declining; pulses are beating more ealthfully; the crisis of the fever has passed and a convalescence has begun that prom ses to leave the patient in a stronger condition than before. adopted, we may classify them as follows:-Pirst, there was a prompt and total suspension of all business at the Stock Exchange, attended with such rules as to forbid outside speculation under penalty of expulsion. This was a policy THE MAD RATE at which business was being conducted and prices were tumbling and stocks were being sent into the Board to be "bought in under the rule," every have succumbed. The very soul and essence of the ad, the banking interest rallied to the support of the community by providing for a system of certificates, duly secured, that could properly represent legal tenders in their dealings with the Clearing House. This enabled them to meet the le demands of depositors.

THE SAVINGS BANKS

institutions, which deal most directly with the poorer classes, and represent the wealth accumulated by the earnings of our artisans, promptly anticipating the fearful evils likely to result from a rabid run upon them, availed themselves of the privilege of their respective charters, and anounced that drafts upon them in excess of $100 ight not be honored without the required notice of thirty days.

Fourth, the government authorized the purchase all the five-twenty bonds that might be offered, and to-day the Assistant Treasurer bought 3,339,150 of these securities and paid out legal Fifth, and finally, themselves (than whom, as a body, there are no more high-toned, public spirited and unseifish pentiemen in the country), without preconcerted action, but at the same time with a spontaniety of impulse, at once creditable and effective, sus-pended all business with the banks, and declined to draw their usual checks, lest the presence of tellers should create the impression that there was a "run," and thereby cripple the good work of these

that has evidently begun, and constitute, it is to be hoped, the pivotal point of a prompt reaction. Now that the excitement is subsiding the situation does not present all the dangers hich at first seemed to impend. No actual values have been destroyed, and no ruin has resulted save to a few, from a rapid depreciation of fancy speculative stocks. Commerce is unaffected; the volume of currency has not been materially abundant securities exist right here in our Nev York banks to meet the emergency, and in short it is already demonstrated that the panic was both circumscribed and controllable. It originated in and a perfectly natural explosion followed as the logical result of putting too much nitro-glycerine on paper. It has been fostered by a natural distrust growing out of the prudential measures adopted by the banks and from o her causes; but, doubtless, it will end in a healthier and more conservative course of ansucial action and a more rigid adherence to the real laws of commerce than has been observed in America for years. The leading need be only generalized in this place, as fuller details will be found elsewhere. The Stock Exchange by a large vote prudently determined to nd business until further notice. No action was taken with reference to the settlement of contracts between brokers, and there is yet no basis decided upon which such settlements can be made. A number of small accounts, however, were closed up satisfactorily to all concerned. THE GOLD EXCHANGE dealings, the penalty being a loss of membership. It was also agreed that the price on the dial should stand at 112 during the day, and that all loans should be made at 7 per cent for carrying. The President of the Gold House of the Gold Room, gave notice at the meeting that Saturday's business would be duly cleared, provided the members would agree to take checks on the Metropolitan National Bank, certified as "good through the Clearing Rouse" of agreed to by the members of the Gold Exchange. Subsequently the Gold Exchange Bank completed the clearances for the transactions in gold on Friday and Saturday, involving an amount of $92,075,000. The arrangement whereby certificates issued on the deposit of bank assets are received in settlement of differences at the Clearing House is working admirably, and has afforded immediate of five-twenty bonds was made to-day on the basis of 110.72 4-10. The savings banks, insurance and a large amount of this class of securities, and, if the will come forward and offer them to the Sub-Treasurer, and thus set free several millions of greenbacks, which, it seems, cannot be legally released from the government custody in any other manner. The total amount of bonds purchased

Saturday and to-day is $6,195,500. It was a mollilying feature of the day that paid in legal tenders all demands made on them which looked like legitimate business, but when the purpose was apparent that a run was attempted, they paid in certified checks collectable through the Clearing House. Not a few among the brokers declined to draw for more than mere there was no perceptible excitement, although crowds of idlers congregated to scan the unusual scene. Among these, were numbers of individuals who sought to purchase stocks, and in their trans-actions made something like the following outside quotation: for cash:-New York Central and Hud-

There is no price for money, and less said about it. Foreign exchange is quoted nominally at 108% for prime sixty-day bills and 100% for sight. THE FOREIGN MARKET.

It does not appear from London advices that any sharp depression has yet followed the reception of the news of the crisis. American securities were dull, but late in the day the market was all better. The following are the quotations:-Consols for noney, 92% a 92%; do. for account, 92% a 92 11-16; five-twenty bonds of 1865, old, 95% a 95%; do. of 1867, 95% a 95%; ten-forty bonds, 90% a 90%; new fives, 91%; Eric Railway shares, 44%; new French loan, 7% a 7% per cent premium. On 'Change to-day cotton was dull, and &c. per pound easier for "spot," while "futures" were in moderate request at essentially unaltered prices. Flour was dull and lower to sell. Wheat and corn were quiet at easier prices.

The Sunday School and the Ministry Accessories to the Decline of Methodism-Plain Talk from an Old-Fash-

The very important but somewhat unfortunately treated subject of Methodist progress or decline in New York and Brooklyn was up again yesterday in the Preachers' Meeting for discussion. It was handled by Rev. Dr. Osbon, who uttered some plain but unpalatable truths. While he did not admit a decline in the sense that some had presented that feature of Methodism, he yet regretted that the denomination had not made that progress here and in the sister city that other denominations had made. The reasons why it had not advanced were, in part, those that had been suggested last week by Rev. J. M. Buckley, but Dr. Osbon offered some others. The conduct of our Sunday schools, he de clared, is not promotive of reverence, because the teaching of the children is for the most part committed to the hands of young, unmarried and inex perienced persons, who know nothing about the mitted to the hands of young, unmarried and inexperienced persons, who know nothing about the care and education of children. Men and women of knowledge, wisdom and experience do not and cannot be induced to go into the Sunday schools. Hence they have resorted to a system of EXCURSIONS, PANDANGOSS AND REWARDS to get the children in, and then a very large number of the young people won't stay in, but hie themselves away to other churches. Then the modes of instruction are crowding off the means of more solid religious knowledge. The time is largely octupied with geographical, blographical and nistoridal comments, so that the practical aims and ends of the Sunday schools for a long series of years have failed in the purposes of their organization. If the older men, our grandsires, should come into the Sunday schools for a long series of years have failed in the purposes of their organization. If the older men, our grandsires, should come into the Sunday school we might accomplish something, but we are losing ground in not maintaining and not absolutely adhering to our cid methods of catechetical instruction in the Sunday school. Another cause of non-advancement is that Methodist people have lost and are losing in a large degree the unction of religion that they used to have. This statement of the Doctor was denied by brethren. Continuing his remarks Dr. Osbon said, We have now a great deal more worship than work, and unction, he maintained, comes largely through work. We have a great deal of praying and pesam singing, but very little work.

A Voice—How about the preaching?

Dr. Osbon—I'll come to that by and by. (And he did come to it with great plainness of speech.) While our preaching, ne said, has gained in rhetoric it has lost in its power to affect the people. He should not be considered, however, as opposed to culture. He wisked he was a cultured maz. Its lack has cost him to culture. He wished he was a cultured man.

Its lack has cost him

MORN TEARS AND SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

than his sins ever did, and he scarcely sees a day that he does not deplore it, but he can't help it now. We are not, he continued, up to the power of the former times. Our sermons have more beauty, but less power, and here it was proper for him to make a comparison. Walle Methodists have him to make a comparison. Wallo Methodists have not made progress in this matter, other denominations have. We complain that the Fathers were uncultured men, but there was power in their sermons and souls were converted under their preaching. While we have the adornments and accomplishments we have not the power. While he would make allowance for the questions that have pressed upon us for the last ten or twelve years, he did not think they were greater than those that pressed upon our lathers, and yet our success does he did not think they were greater than those that pressed upon our rathers, and yet our success does not compare with theirs. The fault is not with the Father, son or Spirit, but with the ministry, and he would have them look over their sermons and compare them with some preached forty years ago and let them strive more earnestly to bring this world to the life and power and glory of God.

The subject was continued for next Monday, when Rey. C. C. Goss is to review the whole ground and to present additional statistics.

Coroner Keenan took, yesterday, the ante-morstabbed in an afray which occurred in his own saloon, 223 Third avenue, on Saturday night. The barkeeper, who was evidently obeying instructions, refused to let Coroner Keenan see Burke; but when the Coroner told him that he would lock him up, he collapsed and conducted him to Burke's room. Burke then made the following stateroom. Burke then made the following statement:—"On Saturday night, between twelve and one o'clock, William Baker and Joseph Hartnett came into my liquor store for a drink. Baker began to abuse some of my friends. I told him not to do it, and I and the barkeeper put them both out. In about ten minutes they beth returned. Hartnett said, 'I am fixed now and I would like to see the —— that would put me out now.' I went to put him out. We clinched, and as we came near the door he stabbed me twice, and twice after we got into the entry." Burke's injuries, although severe, may not prove fatal, Hartnett has been arrested.

ALLEN-M'COOLE.

The Great Fight To-Day--- Tom Allen and Mike McCoole, for $4,000.

Notes Befere the Battle-How the Men Have .Trained-The Betting-Probable Locale-Public Opinion.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 20, 1873.

On Tuesday next the old antagonists, rivals and, one may say, enemies, Tom Allen and Mike Mc-Coole, are to meet in the circle of rope, twenty-iour feet across, within 200 miles of this city, to do battle for $4,000, accordto articles drawn up on the 23d of June. The match was almost inevitable. The feeling between the two men has not been of the most cordial nature, more probably on account of the lively expressions of opinion as to their relative merits by the friends of each. Each owns what across the water would be called a "public," Tom Allen's house, in particular, being a special resort of the gentry with close-cropped hair and velveteen coats, whose talk is of mills and mauleys, battles and bulldogs and bitter beer, especially on Saturday nights, when the host himself presides at the free-and-easy of local fame. Mike McCoole is not in such good odor, his house having a rude reputation as the resort of roughs; indeed, it is not long since Mike participated in a brutal scene, where an innocent flat who refused to pay something like a dollar a drink for very poor whiskey was thrown into the street and adly injured and subsequently frozen that he lost both hands. The Allen men have held that their champion could get away with the big 'un as easily as ever Jem Mace cut up Sam Hurst, the Staleybridge Infant. The partisans of McCoole have taunted Allen's friends with the conduct of their man in the championship encounter with Jem Mace, which they declare was deliberately the fact that ring business in the West is going to the dogs and some excitement is sadly needed to keep things alive. No matter how the fight results, the excursion is sure to be profitable and bring grist to the mill of each of the principals. So it is that the match has been made and attracted no inconsiderable attention, especially among the local fancy. It is safe to say that on this contest hinge the fortunes of the ring in the West. St. Louis alone, outside of the metropolis, possesses the men to match against each other. As the fights are generally allowed to come off here, and the battle ground is more accessible to the Eastern delegation than further down the river, St. Louis possesses marked advantages over the Memphis or New Orleans district. The attendance, by the way, promises to be large. though it will mainly consist of local celebrities and amateurs. The Eastern men generally report themselves short of funds, and disinclintravel a couple of thousand miles to a battle which may not come off at all or end in a one-sided fizzle, travel a couple of thousand miles to a battle which may not come off at all or end in a one-sided fizzle, or—worse than all—prove a "cross," as a good many others have done before it. If this fight should come to naught in any of these manners, or if the police interiere, or if the excursion is marked by the presence of the roughs, who generally go through peaceful passengers at the pistot's mouth, prize igniting is over for good and all in the Mississippi Valley.

Within a fortnight after the articles had been signed, about the 7th of July, Mike McCoole went to work to reduce himself from his ordinary weight, then between 250 and 270 pounds, to fighting trim. "Dublin Tricks" (Billy Blake) has officiated as his Jiguide, philosopher and friend, and has given him a leisurely but thorough preparation. Mike always needs a good deal of work and takes to severe exercise kindly. His training quarters have been on the Gravvis road, near Cherokee street. The usual regimen has been followed, with the ordinary routine of club and dumb bell exercise, sparring and a striking at sand and hair bags. To these, to cultivate quickness in hitting, an essential point wherein he has hitherto been sadily deniclent, has been added the task of punching bladders filled with air and swinging loosely. Mike's pedestrian exercise has been very severe, and twice or thrice daily for the past two months he has been out, blanketed like a four mile may undergoing the "grand in preparation," taking a long, steady walk; winding up with a mile run at top speed with an extra overson on his head and face. Thanks to this work he now turns the scale at a trife under 200 pounds and his face looks hard as iron. His trainer reports that he was never better, and that Tom Allen may cut this kindle of the state of the second of the was nominally under the eye of Jack Madden. It was rather late in the day when Allen began his work, and he is understood to have resorted to Turkish baths to with the very hot weather, and the necessarily arduous work of putting eight weeks' training into four, are understood to have seriously weakened Tom Allen. Added to this is the report that while in training he has not been so steady and assiduous as he should have been, and it can easily be understood that the feeling of confidence in his ability to get away with his big antagonist is not so strong as it would be under ordinary circumstances. However, he has reached his fighting weight, 194 or a pound over or under, and, when he comes to town on a Saturday night to preside at his saiou, looks the picture of health and confidence.

Investment upon the fight so far has been exceedingly limited and at short odds upon Allen—say $60 to $60, $40 to $53 and so on. People in this vicinity are not over desirous of putting any money on either till they can see the men in the ring and judge for themselves whether the fight is to come of, if it is to be on the square and in how far true or false the rumors of the condition or lack of condition on either side may prove. The betting will probably close in avor of Allen, but at small odds, as the McCoole men seem pretty flush and in no wise afraid to back their man at anything near even mones.

The place of the battle has not at this writing

The place of the battle has not at this writing The place of the battle has not at this writing been determined upon, nor is anything known of the intentions of the powers that be, though it is understood, on the latter point, that no interference will be offered if the departure is not attended with riot and disorder. It has been given out that a spot had been selected two hours' ride out on the Facific road, but this "office" is generally taken as a "blind", and it is probable that one of the islands down the river will be the battle field, the principals leaving town quietly on sunday and being picked up by the boat en route.
